‘THEY KILLED HIM’

EXCLUSIVE

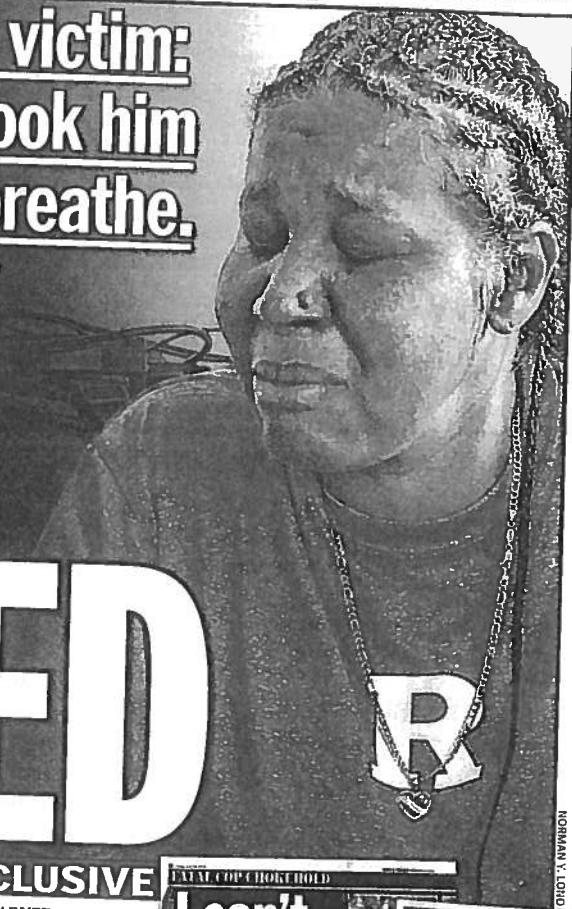

ESAW GARNER watched the shocking footage of her husband Eric being subdued by Staten Island cops for the first time on Friday, through eyes reddened by tears. But it was clear to her what happened. "It was so hard to watch," she said. "He was a nonviolent gentle giant and they killed him."

A colorful burst of flowers belied the grief and anger at the burial of a man who died while being taken down by cops who accused him of selling illegal cigarettes.

The family of Eric Garner, 43, went to the Rosedale Memorial Park Cemetery in New Jersey on Thursday morning to say a final goodbye to the beloved father-of-six.

Garner was buried in a white casket with gold fittings as his family members leaned on each other for support through a brief and intimate ceremony

Elisha Flagg, Eric's sister, held gold and white ribbons with a gold charm that read "brother."

Famed civil rights lawyer Sanford Rubenstein, known for large lawsuits against the NYPD, stood with the family at the site.
